

High School Service-Learning Resources

October 2011

<http://crf-usa.org/materials-catalog/active-citizenship-today-curriculum.html>

This website offers a description of the Active Citizenship Today curriculum for the classroom and the opportunity to purchase the curriculum.

http://www.kidsconsortium.org/kidsasplanners_overview.php?gclid=CMPx8biUgqwCFQtU7AodsitFMQ

This website offers a list of books & resources to help teachers incorporate service-learning into the classroom. It also has a download of “A Guide to Strengthening Students, Schools and Communities through Service Learning.” This information is for K-12 classrooms, afterschool programs, and summer school programs.

<http://www.servicelearning.org/lesson-plans-k-12-service-learning-selected-resources>

This website was created by the National Service-Learning Clearinghouse. They offer resources for service-learning lesson plans and include access to print resources that can be used in the classroom.

<http://www.cde.ca.gov/ci/cr/sl/>

This website is based out of the California Department of Education. It includes definitions of service-learning, reasons why service-learning should be included in high schools, resources for funding, and information on governmental partnerships. Though it is specific to California, it presents the laws of education in that state and can offer resources to assist in ensuring that service-learning grows to be a vital part of our TN school systems.

<http://www.facingthefuture.org/ServiceLearning/ServiceLearningResearchResources/tabid/95/Default.aspx>

Goals of Facing the Future: Critical Thinking, Global Perspective, Informed Action

This website offers studies, reports, project options, fundraising ideas, journals, newsletters, and listserv options. The resources may be helpful for teachers looking for facts about service-learning and action steps.

http://mlkday.gov/assets/library/servicelearning/servicelearning_fullerton.pdf

This “Guidebook for Schools, Organizations & Parents” offers curriculum and ideas for public schools and homeschool families based on the legacy left by Martin Luther King, Jr. The mission of the guidebook comes from MLK, Jr.’s famous quotes: “Everybody can be great, because everybody can serve.”

<http://www.communityworksinstitute.org/>

The Community Works Institute offers events and a book as they strive to see service-learning implemented in all school systems that are serious about serving the community. Their mission is “to support educators in creating curriculum with place as the context, service-learning as the strategy, and sustainability is the goal.”

tools.yasa.org/downloads/curricula/2009SLCG.pdf

This file offers ideas from Youth Service America and the service day that was held in April of 2009. Though older, the ideas and activities are still extremely relevant and useful to teach students about service.

http://findyouthinfo.gov/topic_serviceLearning_howManySchools.shtml

The Find Youth Info website provides information about schools that support service-learning programs in areas around the country. The site also offers resources, definitions, and links related to youth and service-learning.